Rick Mitchell	9-Aug	Yes	&gt; At events where a badge is provided, your badge visible at all times. Seems to be missing a word. Probably "...your badge must be visible at all times." &gt; Any attempt to defraud the Foundation I believe this was meant to be "defraud". &gt; giveaways and/or offers. "or" should be sufficient in this case. https://kingthorin.blogspot.com/2007/09/writing-rant.html &gt; If you do not wish to share your registration information with event sponsors, please do not use the code. This is unclear. In the context of the paragraph it appears in this is the first occurrence of "code". &gt; photograph and/or likeness in future marketing materials. Again "or" is fine here.			Accept

Kyle Smith	27-Aug	No	When did all sales become final? Legacy has always been that there is a refund window that would close at least a month if not longer before the conference. (LASCON always looked at attendee expense timelines, like swag and shirts, and locked out refunds before we submitted those purchases orders to the vendors.) For regional/local events executed by local chapters, there is no discretion in refund policy? This will greatly impact personal purchases of early-bird tickets, which regional/local events depend upon for attendees. 'at the Foundation's convenience' means what? For any reason what-so-ever, a ticket purchased may become an email receipt? I would never purchase a ticket until the day of the event.. and then – 1. not attend since the price points are typically out of personal purchases boundaries 2. not attend since I had no long range commitment via a purchased ticket and there is always necessary activities at work if a commitment has not already been pre-arranged Please reconsider the verbiage. The policy is to far towards only benefiting the conference/foundation and not being flexible for the conference organizers or friendly to attendees.	Since ticket sales are final, the Foundation does not offer refunds. The sole exception to this policy is when an event or session is cancelled at the Foundation's convenience. We strongly encourage training registrants who plan to travel for their session to purchase travel insurance in the event their session is cancelled.		Reject
